e.Learning Services To Meet Your Organization's Training Needs

Delivering regulatory and compliance training to your employees, such as the HIPAA Privacy and Security training requirements, can be quite a challenge. With e.Learning, you can train large groups of employees quickly – any time, any place. e.Learning can help you reduce your organization's travel expenses and training time. The result is that employees better utilize their time and focus on your organization's mission critical tasks.

e.Learning enables you to effectively train employees using online training tools and delivery methods.

Our experienced team of professional Project Managers, Instructional Systems Designers, and Courseware Developers are ready to create your mission-critical training, or consult with you in building your training program.

e.Learning:
Education developed, delivered, or managed using various learning technologies and made available or deployed via the Internet or Intranet.

e.Learning Products and Services

Siemens Learning Management System

Siemens Learning Management System (LMS) gives you control of your employee curriculums while enabling learners to take ownership of their training schedule. The LMS, hosted by Siemens, tracks employees' learner assessments, training curriculums, self-paced courses, and live classes. You can reach your audience using multiple delivery methods, such as Web-based Training (WBT), Microsoft® PowerPoint shows, multimedia, audio, video, or workbooks – any time, any place.

Custom Web-based Training and Multimedia Training Course Development

Working with your subject matter experts, we design and build courses that effectively meet your training objectives. Content development includes:

- Annual competency training – for example, HIPAA or JCAHO
- Safety
- Emergency response
- Patient education
- Corporate policies and procedures
- New hire or ongoing employee training

Consulting – Learning Program Development

If your plan is to develop your own training program, our team of Instructional Designers and Project Managers can assist you in developing programs that focus on improving knowledge and performance. Siemens Education Services provides consulting to:

- Identify and articulate training needs, audiences, and learning objectives
- Design learning activities that meet the needs of your audience
- Develop appropriate materials
- Deliver the training
- Design assessments to validate that learning has taken place
- Develop communication plans to roll out and manage the training

Virtual Classes (Webcasts)

Virtual Classes enable you to create virtual, instructor-led training events via the Internet, and turn your employees' personal computers into classrooms. Instructors and learners attend from any location, making training more convenient. These live events are hosted by Siemens Education Services – using our hardware, software, administrative infrastructure, and technical support – to reduce your overhead and help make your Webcast events a success. This service expands your training facilities without the need to invest in new training rooms.

Video Webcasts

Using the latest in Internet video technology, this service adds several features to the traditional Webcast experience. In addition to PowerPoint presentations and Voice over the Internet, Video Webcasts can include:

- Motion video, such as real-time video of the presenters or pre-taped events
- High-resolution images, such as MRIs and X-rays
- Real-time transcription

Recorded Video Webcasts can be viewed at any time via the LMS. Users can search for specific topics or information, then view the desired content.

Electronic Training Guides

In order to save you time in developing customized training programs, Siemens Education Services training guides are available electronically. Not only will this save you development time, it will help you structure your design, improve content, and provide consistency to end-user training.
